Together we are running a new project called Art et al.

Art et al. means 'art and others'. By this we mean artists, artwork and collaborators.

This is an easy read resource to tell you about Art et al. and what it hopes to achieve.

What is Art et al.?

Art et al. is a website working with artists from supported studios and other artists outside of these.

We want Art et al. to increase opportunities for artists from supported studios.

We want Art et al. to connect these artists to larger art communities.

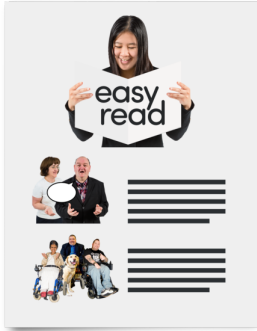

Art et al. is international. This means it includes people from lots of different countries.

We hope that Art et al. will make the arts more accessible and inclusive.

Why is it important?

We noticed that working in the arts can sometimes be inaccessible and not inclusive enough. For example not everyone creates easy read documents.

We started Art et al. to try and change this.

Art et al. will help to connect artists to give them new opportunities.

These opportunities might include exhibitions, articles or content for the website.

What do we believe in?

Art et al. believes in being...

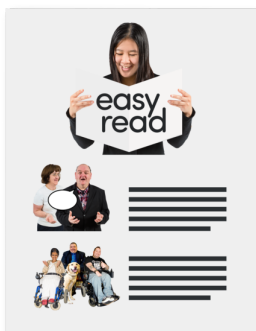

Relevant

We want to do things which matter to the artists involved.

Inclusive

We will feature artists and art professionals who do and don't self-identify with disability.

Accessible

Our content will be accessible to many different audiences.

Respectful

We will respect and support people's choices on how they want to be represented.

Collaborative

We will support people to work together to make art, look at art or talk about art.

Innovative

We will be creative and do things in new and exciting ways.
